Haiku?

What are they?

They come from Japanese culture.

They are a three line quirky observation about a fleeting moment involving nature, mostly.

Haiku is an art of telling stories in three lines.

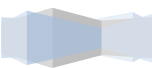

Rules

Following rules are taken from Wikipedia: Typically – but by no means always – haiku(English Form) is:

- are three lines long
- are generally 17 syllables long, especially with lines of 5, 7 and 5 syllable
- are about, or mention, an aspect of nature
- are in the present tense
- are impressionistic, leaving much to the imagination

- are contemplative or wistful
- do not rhyme
- use elliptical ‘telegram style’ syntax, avoiding words such as ‘and’, ‘but’, ‘like’
- use little or no punctuation, sometimes with unusual layout in place of punctuation
- do not start lines with capital letters
- use adjectives sparingly
- do not use abstract nouns
- do not have a title

Haiku and Me

Though there are several forms of poetry, Haiku is one form which I like the most. It is for a reason that very easily the efforts put in to write a haiku might go plain and senseless. Like, they might just become a set of words which do not speak out the message which they were intended to. Though they are in the structure of three lines, they can speak a book of stories. It takes time to pen down a haiku and it's that effort that gives the pleasure.

Though there are several rules, they aren't all strict. They are followed to various extents by the writers. I prefer to follow the following mandatorily:

- Give no title to Haiku
- Three lines and 5-7-5 syllables, deviate only at unavoidable circumstances (that is like never deviate)
- No capital letters, No rhymes
- Others, if can be followed.

This ebook has the first hundred Haiku that I have pen down. I hope you will read and enjoy them. I would be much happier if it inspires to write one!

marathon kisses,
flaming sensual desires,
lust; sprouting the love.

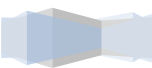

073.

for every 'problem',
that organizes a damn twist,
just prefix a 'no'.

074.

while on the track,
neither over nor under,
just, be the right smart.

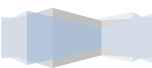

075.

exposure can wet,
decide the appropriate,
exposure can dry.

076.

curious at light,
invited humongous crowd,
turned to a fright night.

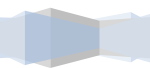

077.

life plays hide and seek,
with the layers of mind and heart, depths in thick and thin.

borrow, from science,
borrow, knowledge from nature, borrow, give utmost.

079.

be dry or barren,
be a pond or an ocean,
it starts from a drop.

080.

passion, loyalty,
pull everything from inside,
pathway, to stand out.

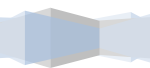

081.

food, clothing, shelter,
an unique identity,
god wants it simple.

082.

they come, hurt and go,
you welcome, unhurt, let-go,
the lessons of life.

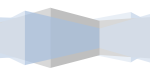

083.

little deeds of zeal,
little does the heart know that,
little remarks, hurt.

084.

gloomy days of past,
the frozen feelings of dark,
girl, you are the thaw.

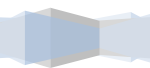

085.

brown, my creation,
blue with major proportion,
green revolution, earth.

086.

kindness has it more,
attention has all of it,
care has most, values.

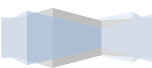

087.

no one knew question,
if question need not be one,
simple answer, ask!

088.

in every of it,
good, bad of it, bit of it,
we call it habit.

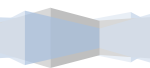

089.

darkness is a fog,
wait for, it will disappear, sheds light, bright and clear.

090.

darkness is a fog,
will melt and disappear,
calling mourn with joy.

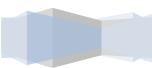

091.

never saw sunshine,
or means, he could only rent,
a deathbed just fine!

092.

away, not when far,
away is when you are near,
and yet feels so far!

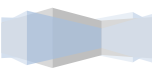

093.

untitled stories,
unwrapped and untraceable.
life, unstoppable.

094.

words clutter, gather,
combine together, add tune, words form melody.

095.

through the messy desk,
comes the clean gist, feels of good, deserving must, should.

096.

like i said, like you heard,
like i wanted, like you are.
my likes and dislikes.

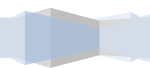

097.

some of those lie, which,
you're unaware of, not mine, they belong to time.

098.

hammer comes strong, breaks,
to pieces, glue corrects wrong, unites with kisses.

099.

daily reads and writes, categories of cart, art, many smiles and bites.

100.

steps, one at a time,
enjoying distracted paths, delightful hundred.
